Escanaba, MICH. Local business man, Mr. Cheeze said that he saw a cow on the moon three months ago. Mr. Cheeze called the police at two in the morning and frantically said that there was a cow on the moon. Police arrived at the resident's house roughly half an hour later and found Mr. Cheeze peering out his telescope in his bathrobe. Mr. Cheeze had acted quite frantically by what he had seen, or at least what he thought he had seen. Before the police could calm the resident down, police looked through the telescope themselves and found something quite interesting.

There was a piece of cheese on the lens of the telescope that just so happened to be in the shape of a cow positioned on top of the moon. Mr. Cheeze was quite baffled at first and would not believe it until the cheese was taken off and he looked into the telescope again. Police then left soon afterwards, leaving Mr. Cheeze in surprise of the situation. This strange event however would lead to something great.

Mr. Cheeze, being part of the family to the Cheeze Family's Dairy and All Things Cheese Corp, he brought up an idea to his family. In the next month, seen in local stores were Mr. Cheeze's Cheese Cows, a slab of cheese shaped beautifully like a cow. It has only been two months since the beginning of sales, but so far the outlook towards the future of Cheeze's Cheese Cows is very promising. There is already talk of making it a global mission. In an interview, he was asked what he thought of everything that has happened up until this point.

"To think that something like this happened just because I got cheese on my good ol' telescope! What has all happened so far is something even beyond my own imagination. I would just like to thank everyone in the community of Escanaba for being so supportive."
